LAW LIMITS HOURS OF CHILD EMPLOYMENT

With the opening of the fall term of school, warning was issued today by Leo A. Gleason, regional director of the Wage and Hour Division, U. S. Department of Labor, that full time employment of children under 16 during school periods is contrary to the child labor provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Katharine F. Lenroot, Chief of the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, which is charged with the administration of the child labor provisions, pointed out that the basic minimum age established by the Act is 16. However, regulation No. 3 of the Bureau provides that minors between 14 and 16 years of age may be employed in certain non-manufacturing and non-mining occupations outside of school hours, but limits such employment to three hours per day and 18 hours per week which school is in session. During school vacation periods, the hours may be extended to eight per day and a total of 40 in one week. Working hours for children of these ages, in general, must be between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m.

General Philip B. Fleming, Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division, whose inspectors assist in the enforcement of the child labor provisions of the Wage and Hour law, said that while these provisions are more lenient with respect to children employed in agriculture, they do apply to minors so employed during the periods when they are legally required to attend school.

ELIPHALET E. WHITNEY

Eliphalet E. Whitney died at his home Saturday afternoon, where he had been confined the past nine weeks. He had been in ill health for two years.

He was born in Carthage May 22, 1860, the son of Stillman and Sarah Berry Whitney. For the past 53 years he had lived in Bethel where he carried on a marble and granite monument business until about two years ago.

He was married to Miss Lizzie Lovejoy Conner of Lancaster, N. H., on Nov. 26, 1889.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a brother, Virgil V. Whitney of Plymouth, N. H., and three nephews.

Funeral services were held from Greenleaf's funeral home Tuesday afternoon with Rev. H. T. Wallace officiating. Burials were in H. Merriam Farwell, Fred Clark, Fred Merrill and Albert Sumner. Interment was at Riverside Cemetery.

MRS. DOROTHY TUCKER HONORED BY SHOWER

The honor guest was met at the door by Joan Bennett and Nancy Van Den Kerckhoven, dressed as bride and groom.

After the gifts were presented contract was enjoyed. The prize for high score was won by Mrs. Earl Davis, second prize went to Mrs. Viola Lord and consolation to Mrs. Harry Wilson. Refreshments were served in the candle lighted dining room, and featured a wedding cake, decorated with miniature bride and groom, which was cut by the honor guest.

Those present besides the guests of honor and the hostesses were Mrs. Harry Wilson, Mrs. Olive Lurvey, Mrs. Ordell Anderson, Mrs. Earl Davis, Mrs. Wilbur Myers, Mrs. Laurence Lord, Mrs. Clayton Fossett, Mrs. Viola Lord, Mrs. Ralph Hood and Mrs. Edward Hanscom.

U. S. MARINE RECRUITING PARTY TO VISIT THIS LOCALITY SOON

A road party from the U. S. Marine Recruiting office, City Hall, Lewiston, Maine, is out to secure applicants either in the regulars or marine reserves. There are two noncommissioned officers in charge of the recruiting road party, and at the present time they are in this territory advertising the Marine Corps. These two recruiting officers will be in the following post offices at the different dates designated. On the 17 and 18 they will be at the post office in Brunswick, on the 19, 20, and 21 they will be at the post office at Bridgton. On the 22 and 23 they will be at the post office in Norway, and on the 24, 25, and 26 at the post office at Rumford. The recruiting in City Hall, Lewiston, will be open at all times. During their stay at each post office, these recruiting officers will help, and give information to all applicants interested in either the regulars or Marine reserves.

Preliminary examinations will be held by these recruiting officers. Some of the requirements for the regulars are: Be between the ages of 17 and 30. Be an American citizen, have no bad police record, be not under the height limit of 5 ft., 4 in. or over the height limit which is 6 ft., 2 in. If under the age of 21, can receive consent of the parents. Weight in proportion to height. The physical requirements for the reserves are somewhat lower than the regulars. A high school education is not required in either the regulars or reserves. The reserves enlist for the duration of the national emergency only, and receive the same benefit and opportunities as the regulars.

If your draft number is about to pop up on you it would pay you to get in contact with either these recruiting officers or at the recruiting station at the City Hall, Lewiston. The Marines have what you have been looking for, "travel, education, adventure, and a career." The Marines are in the air, on land, and on the sea. The Marines are the oldest, most honorable military service in the United States. With the various branches of the Marines any qualified man can find what he has been looking for.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1941

The various railway labor unions are now making wage demands on the carriers which, if granted in entirety, would increase the railroads operating expense by the incredible sum of $900,000,000 a year.

A simple set of figures illustrates just what this would mean to the travelers and shippers of the United States.

Last year, total passenger fares collected by all the American railroads aggregated $417,000,000—less than half as much as the unions are now demanding in higher wages!

The railroads average revenue per car of freight last year was $129.80. So it would take nearly 7,000,000 carloads of freight to pay for only the increased cost of the railway unions' demands. That is as much freight as was loaded in the first 2½ months of this year—months when, due to the defense program, traffic was at unusually high levels.

And here, finally, is the most startling comparison of all: Nine-hundred-million dollars is more than the railroads ever earned in any year after paying expenses, taxes and other costs. Last year the railroads earned a net of but $200,000,000—less than one-quarter of what the unions are demanding!

The moral is clear. Granting of these astounding wage demands would make it necessary to immensely increase railroad charges for passenger and freight service.

It would disrupt the entire economy of this country. It would be a long step toward inflation. The cold figures tell the story.—Industrial News Service.

Have you ever worked in a store?

It doesn't take long, when you work behind not.

In other words, advertising means more goods

That's worth keeping in mind—advertising

Nazi and Fascist Blandishments Fail in Wooing Chile and Peru

U. S. Backs Its Good Will Gestures With Orders for War Materials; Geographical Position Eases Fear of Attack; Leaders Are Popular

The following article by Mr. Tomlinson, author and lecturer, who has studied South and Central America for eighteen years, is timely and interesting. We will publish additional authentic feature articles dealing with significant personalities and fundamental institutions of Latin American countries whose newspaper publishers are cooperating with Publishers' Reciprocal Program (Inter-American) by publishing in their newspapers feature articles backgrounding and interpreting of our "way of life" in the United States.—Editor.

By EDWARD TOMLINSON

IN SPITE of great numbers of active Germans and Italians, Nazi-Fascist pressure has had less effect in the Andean republics of Chile and Peru than in the countries of the east coast. Italians in Peru have tried to court favor with government through influential nationals in that country. Their Fascist friends from Spain have attempted to woo the aristocratic conservatives by harping on the importance of cultural ties with the Old World. Although ardent in its support of the fatherland, the large German colony in Chile has exerted little or no influence upon the political policies of President Pedro Aguirre Cerda and his government.

Geography and local politics have been among the chief stumbling blocks to non-American political activities in these countries. Unlike the countries to the east, the Pacific coast nations are not particularly worried about an Axis attack by force. Ingenious Nazis and Fascists may conceive of the possibility of attacking Brazil and Argentina and maintaining seaboround transportation to them, but it is hardly possible that any of them can see a way of getting sufficient naval forces to the west coast of the continent to carry out a successful attack, or back up any coup d'etat they might help to effect.

Liberal Trend in West

They also find in western South America a strong tendency toward liberal and even radical government. The Leftist, or Popular Front, administration and Congress in Chile are just the opposite of a Fascist regime. Peru, under the administration of President Manuel Prado, is experiencing the most liberal and democratic regime in twenty years.

But Nazi propagandists continue to battle us on the economic front in Chile and Peru. Here as elsewhere they lose no opportunity to play up the difficulties of trade with the United States. They point to the copper industry as the great example of how the Yankees get control of the great national resources of a country, the products of which the United States does not need and cannot buy.

Many Chileans themselves remind us of this situation and its results. "You own," a Chilean official told me recently, "the world's largest copper mine, located 10,000 feet up in the Andes, at Chuquibambilla, Chile. Your copper investments in this republic alone run into the hundreds of millions. You also built up the great copper industry in Peru. Copper is the largest industry and the largest export from each of these two countries. Yet in normal times practically none of this product can be sold in the United States. Markets must be found for it in other parts of the world."

When reminded that in the emergency the United States is purchasing large quantities of nitrate and iodine from Chile, great quantities of copper from both countries, and is likely to continue to do so for some time, they reply, "Yes, but we are thinking not only in terms of the present crisis but of our future economic welfare."

The Nazis repeat and amplify the same sentiments and add that with the coming of peace (and of course with a victorious Germany) the nations of the "New Order," all under the leadership of the Nazis, will need copper and many other Chilean products. "When this war broke out," they say, "Germany had, through its trade, become a tremendous factor in Chile's economic life. She was buying minerals in increasing quantities. More important still, she was buying wool, wines, timbers and beans, an important export, all of which put profits into the pockets of native Chilean farmers and peasants, instead of the coffers of rich foreigners."

The solution to the problem of our commercial relations with both Chile and Peru, or the possibility of relieving them from European economic pressure, is by no means easy. Fortunately, we will still be a large market for nitrate of soda and iodine. Chile also possesses important deposits of manganese of the finest grade. Like Argentina and Uruguay, if assured a steady market she could increase the production of carpet wool and sheep and lamb skins, as well as animal furs. Chile is one of the original homes of the chinchilla, one of the rarest of all fur-bearing animals. There are possibilities for the increased purchase in this country of Chilean fruits. In December, January and February, during the dead of our winter, she produces the finest of peaches, apricots, plums and melons.

Peru Vanadium Source

To the Peruvians, Nazi agents point out that when the war is over, the United States will buy practically none of their copper; on the other hand, Germany and all Europe will need it, and can buy most of Peru's exports. Fortunately, for us, Peruvian economy is much more diversified than that of her neighbor, Chile. She possesses, or is capable of producing a number of important materials which we buy from non-American countries. Aside from copper and oil, she is a large producer of silver and gold and has the world's leading source of vanadium. Peru alone could supply us with our entire needs of vanadium in the years to come. She also has considerable zinc resources and antimony, both at present strategic products. She has recently gone in for the production of fiber flax, an industry which is receiving encouragement and expert advice from the United States Department of Agriculture. Our own production of fiber flax is rather small, so that the larger portion of our annual consumption of 7,000 tons has come from Europe. Peruvian tea compares favorably with that from the Far East.

Although we are the world's greatest producer of short-staple cotton, long-staple for the manufacture of the finest textiles, particularly the type out of which stiff collars and certain fine grades of thread are made, comes from the outside world, mostly from Egypt. Peruvian long-staple cotton, amply to supply us with most of our imports, is among the finest in the world. Last year we imported 31,899,910 pounds from Egypt and only 393,670 pounds from Peru and the other countries of this Hemisphere.

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q: Can Defense Savings Stamps be redeemed?

A. Yes; they can be redeemed for cash at face value or exchanged for Defense Savings Bonds. For example, 75 of the 25 cent Stamps—total cash value $18.75—may be exchanged for a Defense Savings Bond which in 10 years will be worth $25.

Q: How long have Defense Savings Stamps been on sale at retail stores?

A. Sale of Stamps at retail stores originated in the State of Michigan on July 10. The idea met with such success that it is spreading rapidly, and soon Stamps will be sold in most retail stores on a Nation-wide basis.

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q: I would like to provide a regular income for myself when I retire. Can this be done by buying Defense Savings Bonds?

A. Yes. If you purchase a Bond for $37.50 each month, each Bond will mature in exactly 10 years. Thus at the end of 10 years you will have $50 payable each month as each of your Bonds reaches maturity.

Q: But I will need more than $50 a month.

A. Then you should invest a larger amount each month. Every $75 you put into Defense Bonds will pay you $100 10 years from now. Meanwhile, your money serves your Government during this period of national emergency.

Note—To buy Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest post office, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C.

MAINE WORKERS GET BACK WAGE PAYMENTS

Payment of back wages to 191 Maine workers amounting to $8,626.83 during August, as a result of the enforcement of the Wage and Hour law in this state, was announced today by William P. Shannon, senior inspector in charge of the office of the Division located at Portland.

The back wages represents the difference between what the workers were actually paid by their employers and what was due them under the minimum wage and overtime provisions of the Act. These requirements at the present time for all establishments subject to the Act are a minimum of 30 cents an hour, except for such industries for which higher minimums have been established by wage order, and time and one-half the regular rate of pay for all hours worked in excess of 40 in any workweek.

At the same time it was announced that $122,773.65 was paid in back wages to 4,090 employees during August in the five states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Vanished Men

By GEORGE MARSH Penn. Publishing Co. W.N.U. Service

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Six men traveled the Chibougamau trail in the wilds of northern Canada. Six men died. They were reported drowned in the rapids. Murders around the camp area expressed other things. Garry Finlay, whose brother Bob was one of the six, Red Malone and Blaise, a half-breed guide, in the guise of surveyors, arrive to investigate the deaths. Finlay had received an anonymous letter declaring that the men were murdered. There is a suspicion that Jules Isadore, big fur man, has made an important gold strike in the Waswanipi country and will stop at nothing to keep prospectors out.

CHAPTER II—The inhabitants are in terror of Isadore and his right-hand man, Tete-Blanche.

CHAPTER III—On the second day out, just as they had safely passed the worst of the rapids, the three investigators were ambushed from shore. Garry and Blaise were slightly wounded.

CHAPTER IV—From Indians Blaise learned ten days later that there is a "big bird" from the south, and there is talk that three men perished in the Hottaway.

CHAPTER V—Finlay and Malone visit Isadore in his magnificent home. A spy attempt to poison them is frustrated by a clever trick by Malone.

CHAPTER VI—Wabistan, chief of the Montagnais, tells Finlay that the six men who lost their lives on the Waswanipi were shot, and talks of a "bird" that makes a loud noise.

CHAPTER VII—Wabistan shows Finlay the grave of his brother Bob. Garry identifies the remains and notes the absence of a ring that Bob always wore. Garry learns that Tete-Blanche is hunting him.

CHAPTER VIII—The Indians have been stirred up to believe that the surveyors' transit is an "evil eye" that is causing sickness among their children. Finlay gets a note from Lise, daughter of Isadore, with whom he has fallen in love, imploring him to help her escape from Isadore, whom she fears. Garry fears a decoy.

CHAPTER IX

Two days later a Peterboro hung offshore a few miles east of Isadore's fur-post. In the boat a man searched through binoculars for a canoe paddled by a woman.

"If it's an ambush, Blaise, she won't show up," insisted Finlay, "for they'll expect me to land early at the beach to wait for her. They'll be there and will hop on me at once. What would they gain by waiting and bringing her into it? She might get hit."

"Mebbe so!" grunted Blaise, his face gloomy with apprehension.

"If she does show up, Garry, what are the orders?" demanded Red.

"If this thing is straight, I can't have her think that I haven't trusted her. You're to keep out of sight behind that first point until five o'clock, then move around and pick me up. She'll leave before that."

"Chief, you're crazy!" exploded Malone. "That spruce point's a mile from the little sand beach. Suppose they catch you with her? We're out of the picture! We can't reach you!"

"I tell you, Red, they'll never let her come if it's an ambush. There'd be no object in it. If she does come, she'll see that I trust her—believe in her. Don't you realize how humiliating it would be to know that I think her capable of tricking me like that—that I suspect her and am bringing a guard?"

"Oh, I see what you mean, but I don't like it. I want to be handy in case of trouble."

"Thank you, Red."

Garry again raised the glasses. "There she is!" he announced, quietly. He was conscious of the sudden pick-up of his heart. "Who!" he murmured, as a wave of elation beat through him, "have I got it as bad as that?"

The Peterboro reached the spruce point and Garry stepped out. "So long, Blaise! See you soon and I'll have something to tell! Bo-jo, Red!"

But Malone and the eager Flame joined Finlay on the shore.

"What's the idea?" asked Garry.

"Going to kiss me good-by?"

"Take this, Garry," Red pushed a black automatic into Finlay's hand. "It may be useful."

"No, I've got my service .45. She's the sweetest gun I ever owned. I don't need this."

"Take it for me, will you, Garry?" But Finlay shook his head. "So long, Red!" He stooped and patted the nervous alreadale. "Bo-jo, Flame, old pal! Can't come this time! Stay with Red!"

With a wave of his hand Finlay started on his long walk. Lise Demarais was there waiting, when he reached the white beach. He suddenly realized how she had obsessed his thoughts since he last saw her grey face that night at Isadore's. And now, in her desperation she had turned to him.

Lise stood beside her canoe.

"Somehow I knew you'd come!" She grasped his hand.

Warm with color from her long paddle, she was even lovelier than he had remembered her. "Could any man have refused to come after such a letter?"

"Yes, knowing what you do, most men would have been afraid. They wouldn't have trusted me."

"But I'm a mind reader, as I told you. And I'm worried about you, Lise Demarais."

"You're also a brave man." There was a look in her sleet-black eyes that started his blood singing. "Let's sit down. It's a long story." She threw herself on the sand, offered him a cigarette from a silver case and lit one herself. For a time she smoked, clasping her knees while she gazed straight before her under brows like black brush strokes on her transparent skin.

His eager gaze moved from the dark cloud of her long bob and the brilliant eyes to her round throat.

"I don't know why I should have turned to you in my trouble," she began, "unless it's because you're in great danger yourself. Don't you realize they won't let you finish this survey—won't let you leave this country?"

"Forget the survey! I know Tete-Blanche is after us. I saw him at the head of the lake. We'll take care of him. I came here to learn why you've got to leave Isadore's place and when."

"I was frantic when I wrote you. It must have sounded delirious and strained but I was desperate. I'd just had a terrible scene with Jules. He Think of one's stepfather saying a thing like that!"

Finlay's eyes were savage with dancing lights. "Isadore said that to you?"

"Yes and more. It was ghastly! You don't know Jules Isadore!" she cried. "He can purr like a cat and be so smooth—so charming. But he's as pitiless as a wolf. He killed my mother with his womer and his heartlessness. Of course, he's given me a home, education, clothes. But his word has always been law. Corinne and I live like children; are told nothing. He's so secretive. Why we're positive there's something queer going on here, now, at Waswanipi, but we don't know what it is."

Finlay was alive with interest. "Queer? What do you mean?"

"Every summer, in August, a plane flies down from the north. Later, it goes south but it carries no fur. Why should a plane fly here every August and go south empty?"

Garry Finlay, also, wanted the answer to that question. At last he had struck something. "That's strange!" he said, his face as impassive as wood. "It always comes in August, you say?"

"Yes. That's why I warned you not to stay here until August. I overheard Jules boast to Batoche that no prospectors nosing around here in August would ever see home. He thinks you're prospectors, you know."

"Then he's struck gold and wants to keep it a secret?"

"Corinne and I think so. We've an idea he ships the gold dust and nuggets in bags on that plane and doesn't want anyone to know about it."

"But why should it come from the Bay?"

"We don't know but he seems to want to hide the direction from which it comes. That's sure. He's nervous as a cat, then, won't even have Indians around the place."

Finlay wondered what he had stumbled into. A plane from the Bay! What did that mean? Then he said: "Mrs. Isadore got the drugged wine intended for us. What did he intend to do—drop us in the lake?"

"No, I think he wanted to search you—learn who you were. I was so afraid something would happen. I wanted to warn you. Then I saw that hideous Tete-Blanche. After you left Jules struck Corinne for drinking that wine—struck her in the face. He was like a madman."

"Nice fellow! Of course he knows he can't last long at this game. Already six men who have entered this country have disappeared. The police will be here soon."

"Six men?" she gasped. "I've heard of only two!"

"Six prospectors have disappeared and two men have been wounded."

Finlay smiled significantly.

"Your limp, that night!" she suddenly cried, her eyes wide with understanding. "You—you were wounded in the leg on the way here?"

"Yes."

"They ambushed you on the Notaway! But you're all right? Oh, they'll stop at nothing! Do you understand now why I've got to get away?"

"Yes. What was Tete-Blanche doing there that night?"

"I don't know."

"Well, don't worry, we'll have you safe at Matagami by August."

She gave a deep sigh. For a space they smoked in silence while Finlay's thoughts were busy with the mysterious plane. Then he glanced at her. She was smiling at him through curious eyes.

"Charming gossip we're having on my bathing beach on this lovely July day!" she said ruefully.

Her mood had suddenly changed. The compelling charm of her drove from his head all thoughts of Isadore. A beautiful girl sat beside him, desirable, baffling. And in her slow smile was veiled challenge.

"You swim here often?"

Her eyes were busy with a trim moccasins toying with the sand. She raised them and her lip curled. "Fishing for an invitation to join the beautiful mermaids? If you are, you're distinctly not invited. We usually swim in our scales, you know."

She flung herself around, facing him, and impulsively took his hand. "What children we are!" she cried. "This is the second time I've ever talked with you, Garry Finlay, and I'm babbling like a sub-deb at her first big dance."

"I never met one but I'm sure I'd love sub-debs." He leaned toward her. "Do you know how lovely you are and—how dangerous?" he said.

A warm undertone of pink pushed up over her neck and cheeks. She seemed suddenly confused. "It's growing late! I've got to go!" She was on her feet. "You'll take me to Matagami when I write? How can I thank you for daring to come? Oh, it's like a reprieve from a death sentence! I want to dance and sing!" She stood beside her canoe grasping her paddle. Her voice quavered: "Au revoir! Very nice and reckless man!" Her eyes danced dangerously.

"When you send word, I'll come!" he said, thickly. He slid her canoe into the water, turned and with a quick movement had her in his arms.

With a swift catch of the breath she flung back her dark head and smiled up at him. He kissed her hair and eyes and responsive mouth. "You sorceress!" he choked. "You've bewitched me! Courage, midnight eyes! I'll take you to Matagami. Good-by, Beautiful!"

She gave a low laugh as her arm tightened on his neck, and for a moment returned his kisses, then breaking away, leaped into the canoe and paddled off. Reaching the point, she blew a kiss with her hand and passed from sight.

His pulses drumming, Finlay stood at the edge of the water, groping for his mental balance. With her charm and changing moods Lise Demarais had played on his senses as a musician on a harp, run the gamut from laughter to tears. The hard-boiled Garry Finlay had been pliant in her hands as a willow sprout, but in the end she had left him wondering whether she was sincere or a consummate actress.

At the thought he glanced up and down the beach. The shore was deserted. Still under the spell of the girl who had paddled away, he started for the spruce point to meet the Peterboro. Again he felt her arms on his neck, her warm lips, looked into the dancing depths of her eyes. "Acting? What's got into you, Garry Finlay? That girl is straight as a spruce. She's in trouble and frantic to get away and I was the path out. Emotional, of course! Doesn't care a damn for me, but when I lost my head she just couldn't help being human. But she's gorgeous—enchanting!"

He had reached a stretch of shore piled with boulders and had cut back into the bush where the waiting was easier when the brittle snap of a dry stick stopped him in his tracks. His body stiffened while his right hand moved under his shirt to the stock of his .45.

"What's that?" he muttered.

Again there was a movement in the brush somewhere in front of him. Finlay slipped behind a spruce, his eyes stabbing the surrounding undergrowth. Then, from his rear, came a sound in the scrub and he flattened under the low branches.

"So it was acting after all!" A wave of remorse chilled him like a bitter wind as he lay beneath the overhanging boughs. Surrounded as he knew he must be—caught in Isadore's trap—his ears strained for movements of the men who hunted him while his thoughts hung to the girl who had so lightly led him to this.

"She was so natural," Finlay groaned, inwardly, "so terrible real! And her story seemed so straight. But that was just the bait to catch the mouse! Poor Red and Blaise! What have I done to them?"

With a shiver he brushed her from his thoughts. Shame and chagrin vanished. With his .45 covering the direction of the last sound it was another man who lay there, a cold fighting man who waited like a cornered wolverine for a movement in the scrub. Sentiment had led him to play the fool against his own judgment and that of his friends. But the fool would show Isadore's wolves how his .45 could sing before the jaws of their trap snapped on him.

Evidently, from the fact that they had not shot him on the beach, their intention was to take him alive. But they must think him armed or they wouldn't have waited. That meant what? Some devilish scheme of Tete-Blanche's? "All right!" Finlay muttered. "We'll play it that way! That gives me a break!"

Brush snapped behind him. His eyes flashed back but saw nothing. They had him surrounded but could not reach him without drawing his fire so were playing safe. For minutes he lay rigid, listening. Not a sound marred the serenity of the windless forest. Then, from somewhere in front, came the whistling scream of a hawk, to be answered from the rear.

"They're signalling! Going to stalk me!" Finlay muttered.

Presently his roving eyes caught the green plumes of a young spruce shivering as if touched by wind. But there was no wind. The spruce top moved into the notched rear sight of the .45. Again the spruce quivered and Finlay glimpsed a pair of glittering eyes in a swart face. Like glass splintered by a hammer, the "b-rang!" of the .45 crashed on the silence of the bush.

There was no face behind the spruce.

"One gone!" Finlay muttered, inching swiftly around to cover his rear.

He was just in time. From behind the boll of a Jack-pine, eyes roved the undergrowth seeking his position. Finlay lined his sights. Then the full face and a shoulder edged into view.

"Flambeau!"

Again the forest rocked with the thunder of the .45. There was a scream followed by a stillness so intense it hurt the ear-drums. Then the liquid notes of a chickadee broke the spell.

"Two gone!"

But the jaws of the trap were closing on the hunted man. His firing had marked his position. He must move. Quick! Bat on his chest he hunched to the sanctuary of another spruce. How many are there? he wondered. They'll work in close and rush me! They want me alive! They won't get me, alive!

He released the partly emptied cylinder of his gun, ejected the empty shells and pushed in fresh ones. "Where's Tete-Blanche?" he muttered. "I want him for Bob! I promised Bob up there, on the river! I want Tete-Blanche for Bob!"

From three sides came the snapping of twigs as the hunters closed in on the hidden quarry. The eyes of the trapped man blazed with the fighting flame of a beaver at bay. His nerves were ice as he knelt, watching in three directions for the rush that was coming.

Suddenly there were yells and a thrashing in the brush. "But the concealed man would not be stampeded into showing himself. Then a ring of men simultaneously rushed a few yards, to fade, flattened to the earth. But one never moved again. A slug from the .45 had drilled his forehead.

"Three gone!"

"They're close in, now!" muttered Finlay. "The next one will reach me!" His eyes ceaselessly traversed the surrounding undergrowth stippled with sunlight filtered through the spruce tops. Not a leaf stirred. "Good-by, Red, Blaise! I'm sorry!" he whispered. "So long, Flame, old partner!"

Then five men flung themselves at him. He found the white head of Tete-Blanche and the .45 flamed. Again it roared. They reached him and he fired point-blank into a grimacing face. The face burst into a bloody mask. With his heavy gun he bludgeoned a black head that dove at him. Free, he stumbled back and swung at another. As he did there was a blinding flash of light in his eyes. He sagged to his knees, then to the earth.

THIS WEEK IN DEFENSE

Summarizing Information on the Important Developments of the Week Made Available by Official Sources.

The President established in the OPM a Division of Contract Distribution with Floyd Odum of New York as Director to "face the responsibility of alleviating the hardships which have resulted from the defense program and...to marshal our productive capacities to the objective that no plant or tool which can be used for defense shall be allowed to remain idle." The order was issued, the President said, "in furtherance of a determined move...to help the smaller business units of the country obtain a fair share of the defense orders and to prevent, as far as possible, dislocation of industry and unemployment of workers in plants where production has been curtailed by priorities and material shortages."

The Division will set up branch offices throughout the nation where there will be available: procurement representatives of Federal contracting agencies to negotiate contracts and subcontracts, technical engineering advice on conversion of plants to defense work, representatives of the OPM Labor Division to plan reemployment or training of workers in plants involved, and financial facilities of the RFC and other Federal agencies which may be necessary to finance plant conversion.

To spread defense work "among as great a number of firms and in as many localities as possible," the Division will revise Federal procurement practice in favor of the smaller production units—"as yet largely unused"—and promote organizations of pools of small manufacturers to undertake defense work jointly. The Division will also establish exhibits showing parts of defense articles needed, their number, the tools necessary to make them and all other information so that they can do and arrange to do it.

Production

OPM announced military aircraft manufacturers delivered 1,854 planes during August, a record and 394 planes more than in July. OPM reported 2,420 defense plants have been built or expanded since the beginning of the defense program.

The President told his press conference armament production will be accelerated by greater expenditures. The new Supply Priorities and Allocation Board, stating it will stimulate and reorganize defense production "to the limit of the nation's resources," said its general policy demands curtailment of less-essential industries which use materials and facilities necessary to a "realistic defense program."

Navy Ships

The Navy reported that during the first eight months of 1941 a total of 213 Naval vessels were completed—including one battleship, one cruiser, eight submarines and eight destroyers—and keels were laid for 436 ships, including two battleships, 13 cruisers, 18 submarines, two aircraft carriers and 57 destroyers.

Merchant Ships

Maritime Commission Chairman Land announced the Commission's building program will place in operation 1,153 new ships of approximately 12,410,000 deadweight tons between July 1, 1941, and the end of 1943. He said production is running ahead of estimates made in May, and that from 130 to 134 new vessels will be completed this year instead of the 105 estimated in May. Admiral Land said an additional 60 vessels will be delivered in the first three months of 1942, 146 in the second quarter, 154 in the third quarter, and 184 in the fourth quarter. By the beginning of 1943, the program will yield in three months more than the 1,380,000 deadweight tons of ships constructed in the entire war year of 1918.

Army

The Second and Third Armies and 1,000 planes of the Second and Third task force, including Navy and Marine air units began moving into the Louisiana maneuver area for combat practice September 15 to 30. The War Department said it expects to work out under actual conditions of a major battle the role of combat aviation in support of mechanized and armored ground forces.

To improve the efficiency and stamina of the Army, the Department set age limits for field officers ranging from 30 years for Second Lieutenants to 62 years for Major Generals. Officers over age will be given desk duty.

Air Raid Defense

The Army announced that it will conduct exercises during October to test the alertness and effectiveness of Eastern seaboard defenses against hostile aircraft throughout areas 125 to 150 miles inland. Approximately 45,000 civilians will act as spotters.

Aid to Russia

A Russian mission to study procurement of planes for the Russian armies arrived in the United States. President Roosevelt named W. Averell Harriman to read the U. S. mission to confer in Moscow with the Soviet Government and a British mission regarding supplies to Russia.

The Maritime Commission announced the first American tanker carrying aviation gasoline to Russia had arrived safely at Vladivostok. State Secretary Hull issued four export licenses to permit movement of British and Latin American shipments to the Soviets through the U. S.

Aid to Poland

The President authorized Lend-Lease aid to the refugee Polish Government in the form of weapons and other supplies for the Polish Legion training in Canada for overseas action.

Prices

Labor Secretary Perkins reported widespread increases in retail prices of 18 staple foods in 18 large cities in the last two weeks of August. The Department of Agriculture reported prices are now 131 percent of 1909-14 average, highest level in 11 years. OGD Director La Guardia, acting as President of the U. S. Conference of Mayors, recommended revocation of municipal licenses of retailers in cases of persistent violation of Federal price ceilings fixed by Price Administrator Henderson.

Oil, Gas

Acting Oil Coordinator Davies announced all commercial, agriculture and emergency gasoline needs will be met in full during September but there will be a ten percent cut in deliveries on the Atlantic coast States under July. Mr. Davies also announced he had asked for and received commitments from 11 principal East coast oil companies to utilize all available railroad tank cars in transportation of petroleum products to alleviate the Eastern States shortage.

President Roosevelt authorized the Southern Pipe Line Co. to use the power of eminent domain to obtain right-of-way for an oil pipe line from Port St. Joe, Fla., to Chattanooga, Tenn., for "national defense purposes." J. Howard Marshall, Counsel for the Petroleum Coordinator's Office, said the OPM has authority to enforce the civilian allocation program of OPACS and also to enforce a consumer rationing program on the Atlantic coast should it become necessary.

Reemployment of Soldiers

Selective Service Headquarters announced local boards will assist regulars of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps as well as selectees and Guardsmen to find employment when they leave service. The War Department sent a letter to each soldier advising of the program for reemployment.

The Army announced it will observe the following order in release of 200,000 Guardsmen, selectees and regulars during the rest of 1941: dependency and hardship cases; men who complete enlistments of either one or three years; selectees and Guardsmen who reached 28 before last July 1; married selectees who have completed one year; selectees who have completed their normal term of service.

In determining the number of men to be released from each unit, the Army will consider the state of training of the unit, its location, its mission. The Army said it will also release reserve officers, except those in the air forces, after one year of service in order to provide training opportunities for others not on duty. The air force is expanding at such a rate all air officers are needed.

Don Fife, Minister.

As we come to the close of a successful summer season of activity at the West Bethel Union Chapel, we know that our many challenging hours of fellowship together have been made possible by each and every person who has contributed in any way to the program offered by the Church. You who have given of your time, your talents, your tithes, your efforts and your energies have received the reward that comes with service. Those of us who have been inspired by the services of worship in our Church express our appreciation to those who have made them possible. As the doors of our Chapel close until another summer season, may we continue to "take time to be holy, to speak of with our Lord," and "live, move, and have our being, in Him."

The services to be held in the Chapel Sunday, Sept. 14, are the 11 a. m. Youth Sunday Program, and the 7:30 p. m. worship period, at which Rev. Don Fife will bring his concluding message concerning "A Quest for Christ."
